Sub-theme title: Biotechnology Innovations for One Health and Sustainable Ecosystems

Concept Note:

The One Health concept recognizes the interconnectedness of human, animal, plant, and environmental health, emphasizing the need for integrated scientific solutions to address global challenges. Biotechnology has emerged as a transformative discipline, offering innovative approaches for disease prevention, sustainable agriculture, food and nutritional security, environmental restoration, and the development of bio-based products. Advances in microbial biotechnology, molecular diagnostics, genomics, synthetic biology, bioinformatics, and bioprocess engineering are accelerating the development of eco-friendly technologies that improve public health while conserving natural ecosystems. This sub-theme aims to highlight cutting-edge research and technological innovations that promote sustainable resource utilization, climate resilience, biodiversity conservation, pollution mitigation, and circular bioeconomy practices. It will provide a multidisciplinary platform for scientists, academicians, industry professionals, and policymakers to exchange knowledge, foster collaborations, and translate biotechnological discoveries into practical solutions that support human welfare and ensure the long-term sustainability of ecosystems.
